Johnson experiences water woes

Service disrupted in portions of county

by Lilly Adkins
ASSOCIATE EDITOR

PAINTSVILLE — Paintsville Utilities announced a boil-water advisory Saturday for areas in northern, western and southern portions of Johnson County, where water service had been disrupted due to low water levels.

Residents are also being urged to conserve their water usage until full service is restored.

Paintsville Utilities general manager Eric Ratliff held a press conference Monday announcing that they are experiencing low water levels but are working to restore services to all areas.

Ratliff asked that residents whose water has been restored be conservative so they can continue to refill tanks and restore water service to all areas.

"Last week we experienced some very cold temperatures," Ratliff said. "It was down to zero degrees during the day and below zero at night. We experienced a lot of water-main breaks. Customer service lines froze and burst. We had individual water meters to burst, which caused us to lose an extremely large amount of water. Our plant right now produces about 2.7 million gallons a day, and not including the storage we have, our storage tanks have about 3.1 million gallons at a time. With the limited amount of water that we could produce in a day, it's kind of hard to fill the storage tanks. It's portions out in the county, the further out — Flat Gap, Oil Springs, Red Bush — that have been the people mostly affected by water loss. As we continue to try to produce and get water back out into the county, we're using it faster than we can produce it."

Ratliff said some progress has been made, with some water in the Flat Gap area being restored, but that some of the other areas in higher elevations were still without water as of Monday's press conference.

Ratliff asked during the press conference that people with water be conservative and use only what was a necessity and to allow the system to recover.

"Please be patient with us," Ratliff said.

He also said Paintsville Utilities put the boil-water advisory in place for customers who have lost service, but that it wasn't necessary for customers who had not lost service. He said that the boil-water advisory could only be lifted by the Division of Water after service is restored, and water samples have been taken to the lab to have it tested.

Ratliff also said that the water plant is working 24 hours a day and that they are working diligently to get service restored.

"Once we get our new plant on line, hope-

FRANKFORT — A former regional coordinator for Mountain Comprehensive Care Center in Prestonsburg was sentenced on charges involving forgery and fraud.

Kathy Jo Ryan, 49, was sentenced in Franklin Circuit Court Friday after pleading guilty to four counts of employee aid to other to defraud an assistance program.

A joint investigation by Attorney General Conway's Public Integrity/Special Investigations Branch and the Kentucky Office of the Inspector General revealed that Ryan forged doctors' notes and information on applications for the Hart-Supported Living grant in November 2012. The Hart-Supported Living program provides Kentuckians with disabilities the help they need to live successfully in a home of their choice and to participate in their community.

According to the investigation, Ryan helped secure funding for renovations to her home.

"Ms. Ryan used her position to take advantage of a state-funded program that many citizens rely on," Conway said. "I'm pleased that she is accepting responsibility for her actions and that her sentence includes restitution."

Ryan was ordered to pay $64,993 in restitution within 90 days. She received a probated five-year prison sentence. Franklin County Commonwealth's Attorney Larry Cleveland handled the prosecution of the case.

PIKEVILLE — A March trial date has been set for the former mayor of Martin and others charged with federal offenses stemming from the 2012 general election.

The March 10 date was scheduled Thursday after ex-Mayor Ruth Thomasine Robinson and five other people entered not-guilty pleas in U.S. District Court at Pikeville.

In addition to the former city official, others pleading not guilty Thursday were her husband, James "Red" Robinson; his son, James Steven Robinson; city employees Ginger Michelle Halbert and Henry A. Mullins; and Johnny T. Moore.

An indictment returned Dec. 19 charges the defendants with civil rights conspiracy and payment or offer of payment for voting in the November 2012 election in which Thomasine Robinson lost re-election by three votes.

As mayor for approximately 12 years, Thomasine Robinson "acquired substantial apparent and actual authority and power that allowed her to influremained free on bond. All three men entered a plea deal with the commonwealth's attorney office in December 2013.

Jesse James Sr., 50, and his two sons Jesse James Jr., 30, and Kelly James, 25, all of Pilgrim, were originally charged with first-degree trafficking in a controlled substance (heroin) and drug paraphernalia buy/possess.

Jesse James Jr. and Jesse James Sr. were additionally charged with possession of a handgun by a convicted felon.

Kelly James entered a guilty plea to first-degree possession of a controlled substance as amended to a possession charge and was released on bond and will be on probation for the next five years. If he violates the agreement, Circuit Judge John David Preston said a pretrial conference will be set and he will sentence him to prison.

Jesse James Jr. and Jesse James Sr. pleaded guilty to their amended charges and agreed to in exchange for a sentence of five years for the trafficking offense and 12 months for the paraphernalia buy/possess offense.

The possession of a handgun by a convicted felon charge was dropped as part of the plea agreement.

The three men were indicted in Lawrence County in July 2013.

According to the indictment, on or about May 28, the three men knowingly and unlawfully trafficked in two or more grams of heroin either alone or in complicity with each other.

Jesse James Jr. and Jesse James Sr. were also in possession of a handgun after having been previously convicted of a felony and knowingly and intelligently possessed items intended for drug use, the indictment also says.

A press release issued by Louisa Police Chief Greg Fugitt said the city department with assistance from the Lawrence County Sheriff's Office and Constable Paul Wheeler executed a search warrant and conducted a late-night drug raid at the Super 8 Motel in Lawrence County on May 28, which led to the recovery of a substantial amount of narcotics, money and guns.

Now serving you...

Air Evac Lifeteam, an emergency air medical service, has opened a base in Inez. The crew, which includes a pilot, registered nurse and paramedic, is on duty 24 hours a day to serve residents and hospitals throughout the area. Working with local hospitals and EMS agencies, crews can respond directly to the scenes of medical emergencies or make transports between medical facilities. This cuts the amount of time it takes for patients to receive emergency medical care.

fully by summer, this won't be an issue," Ratliff said. "The old plant, we can pump 2,100 gallons a minute, and at the new plant we will be able to pump 4,200 gallons a minute, so it's double. At the old plant we can produce about 2.7 million gallons a day and at the new plant we will be able to produce about 4 million gallons in about 16 hours, so it's a much bigger volume of water. We estimate there's 1,000-1,500 without water, but we are asking people to please be patient."

Ratliff explained that much of the water being restored in the tanks is done at night during hours when most people are sleeping, because that is the time when the least amount of water is being used.

Ratliff also asked that people not let their pipes drip at night and to do other winterization methods. He said updates on the progress to restoring service would be posted on the Paintsville/Johnson County Emergency Management Facebook page, the utilities company Web site, local radio stations, newspapers and television.

CONN: Defendants seek dismissal of federal lawsuit

Conn and Daugherty devised a scheme to defraud the government through false SSA disability claims.

Conn and Daugherty were named in an initial federal lawsuit filed by Carver and Griffith, who have amended their suit for a second time to include Herr, of Ohio, Srinivas Ammisetty, of Stanville, and Pikeville psychologist Bradley Adkins as defendants. Adkins has not yet answered the suit.

The lawsuit claims that Conn, "with the cooperation of Defendants Herr, Adkins, and Ammisetty, created and presented false medical documentation; and, Daugherty, after conducting sham proceedings, granted representative fees to Conn and disability benefits to Conn's clients."

"The fraudulent scheme resulted in the Social Security Administration paying millions of dollars in fraudulent representatives' fees to Conn, and many times that amount in fraudulent benefits to those of Conn's clients who were not entitled to them," the complaint alleges.

The suit claims Herr, Ammisetty and Adkins submitted fraudulent letters that were later submitted to the SSA as part of the alleged scheme.

Conn said in court documents filed last week that the complaint "suffers from the same fatal defects that plagued" the first amended suit, with the plaintiffs adding "allegations about bribery, spying, and Defendant Eric C. Conn's practice before the U.S. Court of Appeals for Veterans' claims.

"Relators also allege claims against defendant physicians and cursory examinations by those physicians," Conn's answer says. "These claims, however, amount to a smokescreen designed to mask the absence of allegations regarding specific false claims for payment to the government. In short, Relators have once again failed to plead that Conn knowingly presented a false or fraudulent claim for payment or approval to the government . . ."

and unlawful possession of a meth precursor, second offense or greater.

Gary B. Branham Jr., 38, of Staffordsville, is charged with possession of meth, possession of meth precursors and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Janna Blanton, 29, of Swamp Branch, is charged with possession of a controlled substance, possession of drug paraphernalia and possession of marijuana.

According to a press release issued by the Johnson County Sheriff's Office, deputy David Pridemore was asked to assist the Kentucky Department of Probation and Parole with conducting a home visit at Castle's residence, which ultimately led to the three people's arrest.

While conducting the home visit, the officers discovered what appeared to be finished methamphetamine product, small baggies, scales, smoking pipes, various meth precursors and a small amount of cash, according to the release.

Two first-stage meth labs were also found in the home, the release said.

Castle, who was on probation for manufacturing methamphetamine, was taken into custody along with Branham and Blanton, the release said.

They were taken into custody and lodged in the Big Sandy Regional Detention Center.

Assisting at the scene were deputy Tim Clark and the Kentucky State Police DESI Unit. This case is under investigation by Pride-more.

Salyersville man pleads not guilty to murder

by Lilly Adkins
ASSOCIATE EDITOR

PAINTSVILLE — A Magoffin County man charged with murder stemming from a May 29, 2013, traffic collision in which a Floyd County woman died pleaded not guilty at his arraignment in Johnson Circuit Court Jan. 3 and is currently out on bond.

Gene Helton, 43, of Salyersville, is charged with murder, first-degree assault and operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol/drugs, first offense within five years.

Helton is scheduled to appear Feb. 7 in Johnson Circuit Court for a pretrial conference.

Helton was indicted in December 2013, but wasn't arrested until Jan. 2, at which time his bond was set at $50,000 cash.

Helton is represented by Hindman attorney Terry Jacobs and asked for a bond reduction at his arraignment.

Helton's bond was reduced to $25,000 cash, and he posted bond and was released Jan. 3, according to records at the Big Sandy Regional Detention Center in Johnson County.

According to the indictment, on or before May 29, Helton allegedly wantonly operated a motor vehicle under circumstances manifesting extreme indifference to the value of human life, thereby creating a grave risk of death to another person that resulted in the death of Miranda Martin, 36, of Wayland.

Helton also wantonly operated a motor vehicle under circumstances manifesting extreme indifference to the value of human life, thereby creating a grave risk of death and/or serious physical injury to another person that resulted in serious physical injury to Billy Royster, the indictment said. He was also operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol or other substances that impair a driver's ability to operate that motor vehicle.

Officials said at the time of the crash that Martin was killed and four other people injured in the crash on U.S. 23 in Johnson County when the coal truck driven by Helton struck a pickup truck hauling a trailer loaded with wood.

Martin and Royster were riding in the back of the pickup truck at the time of the collision and were ejected upon impact, Commercial Vehicle Enforcement said.

Martin was pronounced dead at the scene by Johnson County Coroner J. R. Frisby. Royster suffered serious injury and was flown to Cabell Huntington Hospital in Huntington, W.Va. for treatment.

Three others inside the pickup truck who were injured were transported by ambulance to Paul B. Hall Medical Center, where they were treated and released.

Helton, employed by AZ Francis Trucking of Magoffin County at the time of the crash, wasn't injured.

ence the quality of life of residents of the city," the indictment says.

"These included influence over the assignment of individuals to public housing, the hiring and firing of city employees, and the conduct of city police officers in their interaction with the residents of the city," the indictment says.

The indictment says that "a number of the qualified voters in Martin were disabled and were poor residents of public housing in Martin, or resided in houses owned" by Thomasine Robinson, while others were unemployed or employed by the city.

"These qualified voters could be easily manipulated and influenced by the mayor and others regarding the exercise of their right to vote, by inducements or implied threats regarding their housing status, by fear of losing their job with the city, or by the fear of her ability to affect the quality of their life by using her powers as mayor of the city," the indictment says.

Thomasine Robinson, Halbert and two other people pleaded not guilty to a nine-count indictment issued in October accusing them of engaging in a scheme to defraud the Social Security Administration and misapplying federal funds.

Lawrence Co. woman advances in Mars project

by: Lilly Adkins
ASSOCIATE EDITOR

LOUISA – A Lawrence County woman is one of 297 Americans selected to move into round two of the selection process in choosing astronauts for the Mars One project to establish human life on Mars.

Cheryl Wilhite, 39, is one of 1,058 candidates pre-selected for the program, which will eventually whittle the list down to 24 people.

Wilhite is the wife of Mack Wilhite, who works for the Lawrence County Sheriff's Office, and the couple has a 13-year old son.

"This is a one-way trip, to establish a human civilization on Mars," Cheryl Wilhite said. "It is something that has never been achieved and exploring the unknown is intriguing to me."

She said there will be four rounds and that she has already made it to the second round.

The first round, which included an online application, consisted of a question-and-answer portion, a motivational letter and personal video segment.

Round two will consist of a medical statement of good health and personal interviews conducted by the Mars One committee. Round three will be the regional selection round, with 20-40 applicants from each region completing challenges that Wilhite said will most likely begin the television segment. In round four, international groups of four candidates will begin short-term training at the Earth-based version of the Mars outpost.

"Six groups of four will become full-time employees of the Mars One astronaut corps," Wilhite said. "Then the eight-year training ensues."

Round four will be broadcast throughout the world.

Out of 200,000 applicants worldwide, 1,058 made it to the second round, and Wilhite is one of them.

"The second round is more about the physical and psychological well-being of the individuals, and I believe they will be able to eliminate a lot from that," Wilhite said. "You have to be in superb condition."

Dr. Norbert Craft, chief medical officer for Mars One, sent me an e-mail yesterday and they are requiring me to have an extensive medical examination. They couldn't very well send someone up there with a heart condition or some other health issue."

Round two is scheduled to be complete by March 8, and no date has been released to the participants regarding rounds three and four.

Wilhite said the 24 selected to go will leave in six separate groups of four and that the third round will involve reality television, during which the final 24 will be selected, with the public making the choice of who the first four people will be.

Wilhite also said it is a privately funded, not-for-profit mission that will cost a total of $6 billion, and that part of their goal as a candidate is to help raise money for the project through private donations and corporate donations to their crowd-based funding site at indiegogo.com.

The year "2025 is when they will do their first launch," Wilhite said. "Each of the six teams of four astronauts will also undergo eight years of training before the launch. The habitat will be set up and ready to go by the time the astronauts arrive. The rover will be launched in 2020, and will search for the spot to set up the habitat; the cargo mission will go up in 2022 and the operation will be set up in 2023, with the first team launched in 2024 and landing in 2025. It takes 6-8 months to get there."

Wilhite said the eight years of training will be conducted in simulation habitats and will expose them to extreme temperatures as well as other aspects of what they might encounter if they were actually on Mars.

Wilhite also said one of the biggest risks on Mars is dust storms, which can be lengthy at times, and the possibility of the solar panels being covered for an extended period of time.

"The rover actually has the ability to clean the solar panels. The first crews will consist of constructionists, maintenance and research personnel," Wilhite said. "Food will be grown through hydroponics. There will be a reserve of 15 days of normal use water and food sources and 150 days of limited use water and food sources and a 60-day reserve of oxygen. We will also still have the ability to interact with everyone as we do now but for real-time and physically. We will still have the Internet and will still have communication but there will be delays depending upon their location. There will also be a gym where we can go and work out. Everything is recycled. There is just so much to take in and know about it."

Wilhite said that she would have to leave her family to take the one-way mission, but it is something she really wants to do.

"I would like to accomplish something. When we are all gone, all we leave behind are the memories of what we have done with our lives, and I want to make a difference," Wilhite said. "Just about everyone can name the first person who walked on the moon, but not too many can tell you who the second guy was. I want to make my community, my family and my friends proud to have known me."

In 2011, the founding members of the Mars One team developed a strategic plan for taking humanity to Mars. That first year yielded the completion of a feasibility study after calling upon experts from space agencies and private aerospace corporations around the world. Written letters of interest in support of the Mars One plan were received.

Cheryl Wilhite

How to keep your private information out of the hands of others

by Kim Komando

Kim Komando hosts the nation's largest talk radio show about consumer electronics, computers and the Internet.

Let's be honest: Most of us prefer not to think about who watches what we do on the Internet. What's the harm, some may think, if someone's looking at my family pictures on Facebook?

Well, there may be a lot of harm. Do you want everyone in the world to see pictures of your kids? That you're on a family camping trip and not at home? Do you want advertisers vacuuming up details from your family's social-media accounts? How about a potential cyberthief cobbling together enough of your personal information to steal your identity?

And that's not to mention the other snoops, from the NSA on down, who might decide one of your Tweets or Facebook postings is "interesting."

Scammers, hackers, marketers, spies and identity thieves - together they could make anyone want to surf the Web privately. Here are a few ways to live in our digital world without staying up at night.

First of all, you need to keep your computer free of viruses - programs you inadvertently download that could share your information with hackers. AVG or avast! are good places to start for free antivirus protection. AdAware and Spybot Search & Destroy target adware and spyware.

Next, note that every major browser has an "incognito" or "private browsing" mode. That's one line of defense against advertisers that track where you go, or snoops who get on your computer. In most browsers, Control + Shift + P will bring up a private browsing window. (In Chrome browsers, Control + Shift + N brings up the "incognito" window.)

Another tip: No matter what you do, you leave a lot of information behind on your computer. Your browser has a record of what you've been looking at and what you've downloaded. It also keeps those "cookies" you've heard about.

Some cookies are useful, and some are troubling. A program like CCleaner, a well-reviewed cleaning program, will keep unwanted cookies and other junk off your computer.

Are you worried about someone snooping in your email? Not only does the technology exist, some companies already do it. Gmail users, for example, are used to seeing, say, dog-related ads next to their email window if they've been discussing pooches with a friend. That's done automatically and, to be fair, that's the price you pay for using Google's powerful email service for free.

To be as secure as possible against other prying eyes, try using a program called PGP - that's short for Pretty Good Privacy. (The name is modest - if used correctly, the program should keep your email private from everything but government-level decryption.) It does require some effort and the cooperation of friends and family.

For more information, and detailed setup info, go to the PGP site.

Next step is to keep your Web browsing private. I told you earlier how to keep it safe from advertisers and snoops with private browsing, but that won't stop your Internet provider and dedicated

REAL TROOPERS

BOY SCOUT UNIT 839 from Martin in Floyd County consists of Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts that for the last four years have worked with local churches and community to help with underwear for boys and girls in Sandy Valley Abuse Center. Trish Bentley started the drive four years ago, with each year different and unique as the community comes together to help children in time of need, she said. This year, the Scouts were able to help children and also helped Santa collect for 11 children and two adults in time of need. The Scouts collected from local churches, schools and fire departments and other places such as Chicago, Ill., Orlando Fla., and Greenville, Ind. Bentley and Santa's helpers use Facebook and word of mouth to spread the word about children in need. Bentley said the Sandy Valley Abuse Center is near and dear to her heart. She worked there while going to nursing school, and she got to see first hand what families endure in time of need. Clean clothing, a warm meal and a safe place to sleep are "very important" to them, she said. The Scouts and Santa's helpers make it possible with the outpouring love of from the community, Bentley said. "Please help support kids from Floyd, Martin, Magoffin, Johnson, Pike counties in time of need," she said. Donations of new clothing and used items are accepted. To donate, call 606-226-0700 or drop off donations at local newspaper offices.

by Lillian Wheeler
SECRETARY

The Kiwanis Club of Paintsville is alive and well. Membership is continuing to increase, attendance remains steady, and community projects and focus on kids remain a club priority.

The club hosted the combined meeting for clubs in Division 16 during the latter part of November. Several clubs from Boyd County to Johnson, Morgan and Magoffin counties were represented. Food was prepared by Bonnie Porter and Jim Gambill. An auction of local items from each of the counties represented was one of the highlights of the evening. The governor and lieutenant governor of the Kentucky/Tennessee District were also in attendance.

The half-marathon sponsored in conjunction with the local Rotary Club was a huge success bringing more than 200 runners to our community.

Recognizing the importance of the Fire Association/local fire departments to our county, the Kiwanis Club made a donation of $500 to help in their efforts.

Several new members have been welcomed into the club during the previous four months.

A young lady from Johnson Central High School will be serving as a missionary in Honduras during summer vacation. The club will assist her in this most important endeavor.

Each year the Kiwanis Club sponsors a shoe project for youth in our schools. Thanks to Rhonda Pack, more than 200 pairs of shoes are purchased, wrapped and donated each year during the month of December.

Much of the Club's money used to support these special projects is made through the selling of popcorn. When you

Food City donates funds to Louisa First Baptist Church

LOUISA - Food City's 2012-2013 "Race Against Hunger" holiday campaign to raise funds for local non-profit hunger relief organizations raised over $360,000, of which $1,360 was donated to Louisa First Baptist Church.

Food City, in cooperation with Miller Brewing Company and Kellogg's, began conducting the annual campaign to raise funds to help curb hunger in America in 1992.

"Hunger is a serious problem in America. Food City and our co-sponsors are proud to be a part of the "Race against Hunger," Food City President and Chief Executive Officer Steven C. Smith said.

Throughout the promotion, $1, $3, and $5 scan cards were available at each Food City checkout, and customers wishing to donate selected the desired dollar amount, which was added to their grocery bill.

As incentive, with every dollar contribution made using their Food City ValueCard, customers were electronically entered for a chance to win their choice of a season of racing at Bristol Motor Speedway or a $2,500 contribution made to their favorite charity.

Collection canisters were also available at each register.

"Millions of Americans need food assistance each year. The Food City Race Against Hunger campaign is one way we can help those in need," Food City Marketing Vice President Ron Bonacci said.

"We would like to thank our loyal customers and vendor partners for helping Food City make this promotion such a huge success," Smith also said. "Their generosity will help feed thousands of our friends and neighbors throughout the region."

hackers.

The best way to keep it safe from them is to use what is called a Web "proxy." Tor is the most famous of these. With Tor, each site you visit is sent through a relay of volunteer servers. No one on either end of the connection can see what Web sites you're visiting.

But you can also go with a private company that offers a so-called "VPN," or virtual private network. These can run you $40 or $50 a year, and require a bit of setup, as well, but can be useful in a lot of ways.

Besides keeping your Web surfing private, a VPN lets you watch TV broadcasts in the U.S. while you're traveling in other countries. But they are also very valuable for those of us who travel and are at the mercy of sometimes-unsecure local Wi-Fi networks; they will keep your email and chats private with encrypted communication.

Now, as we've seen from the recent revelations about the National Security Agency's spying, a determined government agency can break many of these defenses. So, don't think you can get away with anything illegal. But against many of the usual suspects - marketers, identity thieves and the like - these tips will make the Internet a much more secure place for you.
